Reciprocating arm transmission systems are used in agricultural tractors as engine gear box transmission units or units for distributing the power of an engine to an implement. In a typical tractor transmission system, the input shaft of the transmission is connected to the engine crankshaft with a first pair of bevel gears; the output shaft of the transmission is connected with a second pair of bevel gears, which second pair of bevel gears is a reversing gear set; and the shaft of the reversing gear set is connected with a second pair of bevel gears which gear set may be selectively placed in a positive or negative position. An example of such a transmission is illustrated in FIG. 1. In such transmission systems, a so-called muffler clutch is normally attached to the positive or drive end of the transmission to provide a safety device which stops the engine from driving the transmission if the engine should fail for some reason. Such muffler clutches are illustrated in FIG. 2. An example of such a muffler clutch assembly 100 is shown in FIG. 2. FIG. 2 illustrates a rear view of the muffler clutch assembly 100 with the engine 102 and the transmission unit 104 shown removed. In FIG. 2, the muffler clutch assembly 100 includes a yoke 108 having a shaft 106 pivotally attached thereto. The yoke 108 is adapted for attachment to a transmission unit such as transmission unit 104, for example, using a pin 107. The yoke 108 is formed with an internal cavity 108A and a plurality of radial slots 108B. The yoke 108 further includes two bearing surfaces 109, 109A. In use, the yoke 108 is positioned within the transmission 104 such that the bearing surfaces 109, 109A face 3e33713323
