BrowserViewer is the little pet you keep between your fingers because of its ability to view web pages without a proper browser installed on your system. How does it manage this? It's a set of unique features that enable the program to request the web page without requiring you to employ a local browser, and doing so with very little work. Executable file required Working with BrowserViewer is very easy because there's no setup required to get started. Simply drop the executable file on a USB flash drive and take it with you whenever you need to fire up the application. BrowserViewer has some limitations: it only supports one website per run, so you need to add URLs to the list of selected URLs. Moreover, its information comes from a kind of HTML meta field only, so if there's no such field available, it won't be able to provide relevant details about a web site. Finally, BrowserViewer is not intended to support programming. KwikStix Fire Detective is a useful utility for getting to the root of your computer's problem. Advantages of an app for pc Unlike a lot of other optimization suites, KwikStix Fire Detective doesn't have a comprehensive set of tools for keeping your machine running at its best.
