Of key or keygen Patch Or Crack Tajima Dgml By Pulse. © Laravel. Count() vs CountBy() I'm using Laravel 5.2 and I have the following query: $users = User::where('id' => $uid) ->where('group_id' => 5) ->count(); This query returns me the total users based on the group_id and its parent_id. I'd like to do the same thing but this time I want to get the count() of the group_id. The data is saved like this: id | group_id | parent_id | 5 | 1 | How can I do that? A: You should use whereHas()! $users = User::where('id' => $uid) ->whereHas('parent', function($query) { $query->where('group_id', 5); }) ->count(); Read more about whereHas here: You can use whereHas within the same query, or place a closure in the same way that you already have in your original query. Also, the correct way to write your query should probably be: $users = User::where('id' => $uid) ->where('parent' => function($query) { $query->where('group_id', 5); }) ->count();

Is it possible to make my own "Action Bar"? (Instead of having the 3-D icons and the text on the left.) Is there an API for this? Or a developer somewhere who has made one, I would love to use it. A: Is it possible to make my own "Action Bar"? Definitely. The action bar is a view within the action bar. So, in addition to using the Android Support library for the action bar, you can extend whatever view you want (in this case, a FrameLayout) and use that as the action bar. As an example of that: Instead of having the 3-D icons and the text on the left. You can have whatever you want. The action bar basically just serves as a container for your action items. using System; using System.Collections.Generic; using System.Linq; using System.Text; using NLog; namespace Library.Logging { class Log { private static readonly ILogger Logger = LogManager.GetCurrentClassLogger(); public static void Error(string message
